El control glucémico deficiente y la presencia de neuropatía diabética se identifican como factores de riesgo para el desarrollo de infección del pie diabético. La variabilidad en la etiología de la infección del pie diabético y la aparición de microorganismos resistentes tras repetidas exposiciones a la antibioterapia, hacen necesario el estudio microbiológico y la obtención del antibiograma para el manejo adecuado de estos pacientes, evitando, además de la emergencia de resistencias, el aumento del coste económico y la aparición de reacciones adversas al tratamiento.
