My novel, The Red Dragon and his Ghost Soldiers, is a story about the son of a plantation owner and two slaves who grows up together in the deep-south during the height of slavery in Louisiana. The Blanchard's moved to Louisiana in the early 1800's and purchased a plantation. They came from Norfolk, Va., where they were part of a society of wealth and privilege. Carey Blanchard was born and reared on this plantation amongst the slaves of Roselawn. Pierre Benoit and Jules Mouton are the two slaves born on the plantation and raised as sons of the Blanchard's.

Although Carey's parents treated the slaves decently, he knew in his heart slavery was wrong. Carey fell in love with a young creole girl and wanted to marry her. His parents shipped him off to the West Point of France for schooling. This is where he begin his adult life. He was an officer in the French Army and fought in two world wars. Returning home to America, Carey finally realized his dream of ending slavery by sending the slaves to military school in France.

The Book is full of soldiers, battles, heartaches, tragedy and triumphs. The Red Dragon goes from the early 1800s through the end of the American War between the States. The Book is loosely based upon my great, great, grandfather and family. Grandfather Carey wasn't like my main character. He was for State's rights, for slavery and a Colonel in the Louisiana Militia. He recruited for the Confederacy until his death in 1861.
